Subsidised Service by the Social Welfare Department

Hong Kong Family Welfare Society

Established in 1949, the Hong Kong Family Welfare Society (HKFWS) is one of the major charitable non-governmental social welfare organizations in Hong Kong. With a "family-centric" perspective, we are committed to delivering quality and professional social services to enhance the wellbeing of families and individuals in Hong Kong and foster a caring community. The Hong Kong Family Welfare Society pays attention to the physical, mental, and spiritual needs of different family members. The organization continuously innovates its services to provide appropriate support and promote development.

Introduction of Our Centre

In August 2023, the Social Welfare Department implemented the district-based "Social Work Service for Pre-primary Institutions". The Hong Kong Family Welfare Society was selected as one of the qualified teams to provide stationing social work services to 12 kindergartens and nursery schools in Tuen Mun East. The service is called the "Nurturing Seeds Kindergarten Social Work Service." In addition to providing stationing social work services, the centre also organizes groups and activities to meet the growth and developmental needs of children and provide support to families.

Objectives of Social Work Service for Pre-primary Institutions:

- 1 Provide appropriate casework support and referral services to children and families in need, with an emphasis on early identification;
- 2 Teach children to understand and manage emotions and develop social skills, so as to promote the healthy development of children;
- 3 Promote the message of "children protection", secure a safe and healthy environment for children;
- 4 Provide emotional support and parenting education to parents so as to foster positive parent-child relationships and enhance family harmony;
- 5 Connect pre-primary institutions (PPI) with community resources to address the needs of children and their families.

Since when did doing homework become a daily battlefield at home? When did the adorable little bubble dragon in the family turn into a tyrannosaurus just to help the child overcome procrastination? And when did it even lead to couples clashing swords over it?

Evidence and research show the benefits of doing homework. However, what strategies can parents do to lessen the impact homework has on the parent-child relationship?

1. Understand the child's feeling

If a child refuses to do homework, there could be different reasons. They may be tired after a whole day at school, or the work were difficult. Remember to deal with feelings first, then the task. Help the child calm down and talk about their worries before solving the problem.

2. Find what motivates them

Ask what would make the child do homework after a long day. A big playtime reward? Free time? Fun in learning? Praise from parents or teachers? Find one motivating reason, then encourage the child or help them begin.

3. Align expectations

Kids and parents may want different things. Consider how much time and energy you have, set realistic goals, and agree on a plan that works for everyone.

Learning is of course important — it's wonderful when children enjoy learning and become self-disciplined. However, if forcing homework makes children lose their motivation to learn, affects their health and damages parent-child relationships, it brings more harm than good.
